

Identity-Action

How can I trust on my “new heart” and “new Spirit” more?

What prevents me from claiming God’s declaration of righteousness?

How can I create space in my day to connect more deeply with God?

What can I do to remind myself of who I am in Christ?

What would change if I relied more on the power of the Spirit to change me?

How do I attempt to maintain an identity in the eyes of others?

In what ways do I measure my worth by comparing myself to others? (at home, at work, at church, within family)

How would I complete the sentence, “I am significant because....”?

How would my treatment of other change if I believed that I am truly righteous?

If I fully claimed my identity in Christ what would be different?

Self-Spirit

In what ways do I need to rely on the Spirit more for transformation?

Why do I resist submitting to the Spirit?

How would my life be different if I focused on submission versus obedience?

What behaviors are not aligned with my new identity in Christ?

Where do I sense that the Spirit is leading me?

Why do I rely upon my own ability to grow and change?

What would I have to change to “set my mind” on the Spirit more often?

In what circumstances am I not allowing the Spirit to lead?

Why am I hesitant to let the Spirit lead?

Margin-Mission

How much margin exists in my week?

What does my schedule say about my priorities?

What can I give up in order to have time for mission?

What am I putting off till I have more time?

In what ways has my schedule hindered my ability to listen to God?

What is one thing I can do to leave more room for God and others?

Who are the people God is leading me to?

What is the next step to sharing life with those in my network or neighborhood?

Decisions-Calling

What decisions do I need to yield to God?

What areas of life do I allow God to control? What areas do I keep for myself?

How do I leave room for God when making a decision?

Where do I resist letting God control my choices?

What family choices do I need to yield?

In what ways do I sense God calling me to serve the kingdom?

Who are the people that God is placing on my heart?

Where do I need to let go and let God lead?

What decisions did I make on my own today without listening to God?

How is my lack of faith preventing me from following a path God is revealing/has revealed to me?
